A Call from Ruth
Challenges to Preventing Financial Fraud

Psychological Barriers
► Illusion of invulnerability (I can’t be taken.)
► Reactance (You’re not the boss of me.)
► Threats to self-esteem (I am not stupid.)
► Too much information (I can’t remember what you taught me.)

Systemic Barriers
► Scams everywhere (how do you warn against so many different frauds?)
► Scale (how do you reach a critical mass of consumers?)
► Proving a negative (how do you show when something doesn’t happen?)
► Persistence (if you can show a preventative effect, does it last?)

Inside the Con Man Mind

Why does emotion cause people to act irrationally?

“Emotion is unpredictable. It peaks and valleys. And once you know where to take the person for the peak, and you can keep them up in that altitude, then you can control them. If you drop them back into the valley of logic, you’re gonna lose them.”

Two Parts of the Brain

The Thinking Brain (Cortex): cold logic, reason and data. Plan for the future, think about the big picture, delay gratification and weigh facts and situations.

Key Emotions used by Cons

► Compassion – Messages that appeal to the heart.

► Fear – Messages that scare us into action.

► Affinity/Social Acceptance – Messages that appeal to the need for belonging.
Persuasion and Influence Tactics

Frequently Used Tactics

► Phantom Riches: Dangling the prospect of wealth; something you want but can’t have
► Source Credibility: It is better to deal with credible people/experts/authorities
► Social Consensus: If everybody wants it, it must be good; someone did their homework
► Reciprocity: Doing a small favor in return for a big favor
► Scarcity: If something is rare or scarce, it must be more valuable

“Mr. Roberts, you know from having read my book that, with my fifteen years of success as a CSFA and Investment Broker, you can rest assured your money is in good hands.”

People acknowledge that biases affect other people’s choices and actions
- Less likely to see impact on themselves
- 80% of investors believe they are “above average” at spotting fraud

The Bias Blind Spot
The Halo Effect

- Bias: assumption that people who rank highly on one important quality (warmth) have other unrelated qualities (intelligence)
- Consequence: unwarranted trust

Fast Talking/Fast Thinking

- Listening to a fast talker leads to:
  - Energetic, happy and enthusiastic feelings
  - Tendency to view investments as:
    - higher quality/less risky
    - more deserving
- Fast thinking and fast decision-making lead to more immediate satisfaction with choice
Proximal Pressure

- Consumers experience more pressure when those advocating an investment are:
  1) physically close to them and
  2) socially close to them.

What Do We Need to Know?

- How big is the problem? What is the cost to society?
- Are there useful, simple means of assessing (and overcoming) one’s own psychological susceptibility to fraud?
- What factors most influence susceptibility? Is it simply a matter of targeting?
- To what extent does greed play in victimization? Impulsivity? Self-control?
- How can we harness technology to improve detection methods?
- What differentiates cons from “good salesmen”?
- Are there feasible regulatory or enforcement changes that could deter financial criminals? Better protect consumers?
- And much more!
